CIA Director Stansfield Turner, right, presented Distinguished Intelligence Medal to the sons of the late Deputy Director Frank A. Briglia: Michael, Steven, Anthony and Frank Jr.

CIA Director Stansfield Turner has awarded the agency's highest award for outstanding service, the Distinguished Intelligence Medal, posthumously to Frank A. Briglia, former deputy director of the agency's office of research and development. Briglia and his wife, N. Belle Briglia, were killed in an automobile accident last August. The award was given to Briglia's four sons—Michael, Steven, Anthony and Frank—who live in Vienna, in recognition of their father's outstanding service and his contributions to adding "new analytic and collection capability to the intelligence community."
